

Family Law

When a marriage breaks down Moore Law can assist you to resolve children and property matters. We can file documents and represent you at Court. If you and the other party have decided that you do not want to go to Court you should ask about our mediation service.

Whether we provide legal representation or mediation we will strive to help you resolve issues as amicably as possible.

It is now a requirement of the Family Law Act that you have a certificate from a registered dispute resolution provider before you start child related proceedings in the Family Courts. Moore Mediation can issue those certificates.

If you are seeking a divorce we can assist with that.

Read more Family Law Mediation Children and Separation Counselling
Services Matrimonial Property Settlement Divorce Valuing Assets Contributions to Property Spousal
Maintenance Superannuation Splitting

Useful links Family Law Courts Australian Government - Family Law Family Law Act 1975

Important Documents Financial Statement Family Law matters can be expensive. We want to help to minimise the expense to you. We recommend that you complete this form before you talk to us. It will save time by giving us the information needed to advise you and make a start on your matter.

The Financial Statement is a Court Form. Even if you do not take Court action we suggest that you complete the form and provide it to us.

"I was very pleased with Moore Law and how they handled my family law matter. I was going through a terrible time – so were my kids. I got good advice and we eventually settled things."

Case Studies Ted and Sue Case Study
Our Lawyers Joanne Collie Jane Moore